Jesus

I speak with determination today. I look at my apostles, serving so diligently to prepare others for my return and I am consoled. My heart sighs with the rejection of some, but also lifts in hope at the acceptance of so many. Little apostles, you are pleasing to me. You labor for Heaven and you are teamed with Heaven. Together, we bring hope to those formerly without hope. This is the path to holiness for you. I direct you in everything and you proceed along this path that I have marked out for you. All is well in your case. I want to explain to you why I speak with determination today. I am determined to push out further into the world. I desire that everyone have the light of Heaven. I want confidence for all and comfort for anyone suffering. I send a great rush of grace for conversions at this time. This is a time for hearts to change. Because I desire a great many conversions, I supply all that is necessary to achieve this goal. You will find, my apostles, that many will be drawn to the truth of our mission. Accept this with profound humility. Show the world how small you are and they will see how great I am. This is the way to win souls for the Father. I am so pleased when an apostle accepts slights and insults with peace. I am pleased by this because it shows me that you truly accept the call to imitate me. It also shows me that arrogance is receding and humility is spreading. Oh, what joy this gives to the infant in the manger. Accepting insults in humility is a favorable gift for the King. Truly, I look at these offerings and I rejoice. When I rejoice, graces flow unhindered and unencumbered, bathing the whole world. Never underestimate the power of you, the humble apostle, joined to me, the determined God. Together, we are changing the world.
