Jesus

I have willed a time of great joy for my beloved apostles. Joy is something that the world wishes to take from God's children, but joy is available nonetheless. The world encourages people to concentrate on comfort and possessions. I ask you to concentrate on service. This is a marked contrast, is it not? Let me explain why service brings you joy. If you rise each day and pledge allegiance to God, you will begin that day with more thought of serving than being served. In this way, you look at your day as an opportunity to work for Heaven and to work for your brothers and sisters. This perspective sends you into the day as a servant. When the day presents you with opportunities to assist or console others, or simply to be tolerant of people, you do not view this as a burden or interruption of your entertainment and comfort. You view these moments as requests made to you directly from the Throne of God. Fulfilling a request made to you by God brings joy. You serve Heaven and we fulfill our part of the agreement by sending you joy. If all of God's children lived this way, there would be great joy on Earth. Through this joy would come peace. If even one of God's children makes the commitment to serve as a beloved apostle, there is an increase of joy and an increase in peace. This is because an apostle does not become angry when he or she is inconvenienced. The apostle responds in calm trust when the world presents them with difficulty, or even pain. There is no striking out at others. There is no rebelliousness. There is peace. The world is changing and it is changing one person at a time. Join me and make a commitment to peace in your world. I will send it through you, my beloved apostles.
