Jesus

God's little children know great suffering on Earth, it is true. There will always be those who are suffering. Together, we extend the greatest love and assistance to those who carry the cross because you will carry it one day too, and you will then benefit from the help of others. Dear brothers and sisters, all is well. I can say that all is well because I view all from the perspective of Heaven. Can I ask you to share that view with me? I will give you this view, if you are willing to accept it. From Heaven, I see that souls cry out to me. They ask for relief from darkness. I am sending relief, my dear faithful ones. I am sending great conversion graces. There are times when a child is having trouble and the child cannot see how to solve a problem or remove himself from a situation. The parent sees more clearly, of course, and often understands what the child requires to recover. What parent is unfamiliar with the protesting cry of the child who wants to do it his own way, despite the danger of the child's intended path? The parent must then step in and avert the child's course, showing the child the better and safer way. Such protests a parent must endure! But a good parent perseveres in the course that will benefit the child in the long run. I am the good parent in this time. I am looking at the world and I have decided that it is time to pierce the darkness with my light. I have told this to my beloved apostles. Please trust me. Please support me. Please do as I ask and examine your role in the renewal each morning, when you offer me your day. I will then continue to flow my light through you into the world. Dearest friends, I am your savior. I do not abandon you. Do you understand that Heaven is your intended destination? Do not object when others come to Heaven. It is for this they were born on Earth. I understand earthly grief. You know that I understand because I experienced great human grief. I will comfort you. I will sustain you. You have been asked to spread my heavenly calm. All is well. You know this because I am telling you this. You are one who believes your God. Spread my calm, my grace, my joy. Will you support me, Jesus Christ, in everything? It is this I am asking of you. Rest joyfully in your soul with me. I will give you exactly what is needed for your world and you will be a holy carrier of my grace. I am with you. Rejoice.
